Behavior Management Plan

If a student exhibits behavior in the classroom that does not support their own learning or the learning of others, the teacher will make every attempt using Love and Logic techniques, as well as other emotional regulation strategies, to help a student re-engage with the expected classroom activity. If the student cannot self-regulate or redirect, the teacher will call the office staff or the director. The office staff or director will escort the student downstairs to the office to give him/her a quiet space to calm down and think about his/her choices. Once the student calms down, he/she will be able to return to the classroom and a staff member will escort the student back to class.

If the student refuses to leave the classroom with the office personnel, the parent or guardian will be called immediately and asked to come to the school.

Any work missed will be made up by the student, so he/she remains up to date with his/her academics. It is the hope that making up work will also help the student understand and take responsibility for their schoolwork and behavior. The teacher will decide on a case-by-case basis if the school work will be completed in class or at home.
